MYSTERIOUS FIELD GLASSES.

Concerning the field glasses with foliage mysteriously photographed on them, reported by the Inyo Inedpendent, Thomas Tennant of San Francisco, Thomas Tennan writes I in your issue of yesterday, under the above capation, you quote from the layo Independent concerning a pair of field glasses found by an Indian on the desert, both object glasses of which were covered with beautiful photographs or etchings of desert shrubs, leaf stalks. etc. This is one of the cases where a vivid imagination misleads the judgment there is no photographing about it; each object glass of those field glasses is made of two seperate lenses, one double convex—the other plane-concave, double convex—the other plane-concave, fitting accurately together, and thus forming one achromatic glass. For the purpose of preventing the introduction of moisture or dust between these lenses, a thin film of perfectly transparent varnish is taid on the surface, gluing them together, when in use, if allowed to be exposed to the heat of the sun, this variety melts and spreads over the interior nish melts and spreads over the interior surfaces of the lenses, frequently assum-ing very beautiful and fantastic forms— but there is no ghost in it." I have in the course of business during the past twenty-three years removed many such photographs in object glasses by sepaphetographs in object glasses by sepa-ming the lenses with the agency of heat, clearing off the old varnish and renewing with fresh, then no photographs are easible. The Inyo case is one of the same kind, and if the editor of the Independent will send the glasses up here to its Battery street, I will demonstrate it, under the supervision of a committee of the Academy of Natural Sciences.

Tue London Daily Telegraph publishes a telegram dated Mosul, April 20th, from the distinguished English aniquarian, George Smith, whose previous discoveries in ancient Assyrian history have created so much interest. Mr. Smith is prosecuting his researches in Mesopetamia and has been again successful in obtaining results is of early Assyrian kings, tablets of Babylomish legends, contemporaneous of historical memorials of Nebuchadnezzar, Cambyses, Darius and other kings; curious mementoes of the Parthian with unmistakable dates, and a perfectly new text of the annals of Tiglath Pileser. He has forwarded full descriptive letters which will be awaited with the profound-est interest. His discoveries bear date as far back as 1300 B. C.
